The Society for the Study of Narrative Literature is an international nonprofit association of scholars dedicated to the investigation of narrative, its elements, techniques, and forms; its relations to other modes of discourse; its power and influence in cultures past and present.

“Narrative” for us is a category that may include the novel, epic poetry, history, biography, autobiography, film, the graphic arts, music, performance, legal writing, medical case histories, and more.

The Society sponsors the International Conference on Narrative each year. The first conference was held at Ohio State University in 1986, and in subsequent years, the meeting has been held at sites across the United States, Canada, and France. At each conference, approximately 250 speakers address issues of narrative from a variety of positions and perspectives.

There are currently approximately a thousand members in SSNL, and new members are always welcome. Membership in the Society includes a subscription to Narrative (winner of the 1993 award for Best New Journal from the Council of Editors of Learned Journals), as well as to the Society’s newsletter, which contains information about the annual conference, MLA sessions, the online discussion group, and other activities.

AWARDS: CALL FOR NOMINATIONS

THE BARBARA PERKINS & GEORGE PERKINS AWARD

This year the Perkins Prize will be judged by Professor Eileen Gillooly (Associate Director, Heyman Center for the Humanities / H2 – 1 Heyman Center / Columbia University / New York, NY 10027); Professor Dorothy Hale (Department of English / 322 Wheeler Hall / University of California at Berkeley / Berkeley, CA 94720-1030); and Gerald Prince (521 Williams Hall / University of Pennsylvania / Philadelphia, PA 19104-6305). Please send a copy of the nominated book to each of the Committee members at the above addresses.

Publisher, third party, and self-nominations are appropriate. Nominations should be submitted as soon as possible. The committee begins its deliberations in the spring; nominations received after June 1 will be at a disadvantage.

The winner will announced at the MLA Convention in December, and the prize presented at the annual Narrative Conference the following spring. The prize, awarded to the book making the most significant contribution to the study of narrative in a given year, consists of $1,000 plus a contribution of $400 toward expenses for the winning author to attend the Narrative Conference where the award will be presented.

BEST GRADUATE STUDENT PAPER

All graduate students who present papers at the SSNL Annual Conference are invited to compete for the prize for the best graduate-student paper of the 2008 conference. The winner will receive a copy of a Perkins Prize-winning book of his or her choice and will be invited to expand the winning paper and submit it for consideration by Narrative. Submit your papers electronically as attachments (Word PC-compatible files, please) to both of the judges, David Richter, drichter@nyc.rr.com and Lisa Zunshine, lisa.zunshine@yale.edu, no later than May 18, 2008. Be sure to submit the paper you actually presented at the conference, not some expanded or edited version of it.

WORKSHOP ON THE TEACHING OF NARRATIVE (THURSDAY)

This workshop on narratology and pedagogy will include brief presentations on and extensive discussion of the forthcoming MLA volume Options for Teaching Narrative Theory and the newly launched Society for the Study of Narrative Literature website.

NEWCOMERS’ DINNER (THURSDAY)

Those who are attending the conference for the first or the second time are invited to join members of the Narrative Society’s Executive Council and other oldtimers for our annual (dutch treat) newcomers’ dinner on Thursday evening at 6 PM. If you fall into any of these groups and would like to go to dinner, please show up in front of the Scholars’ Choice exhibit in the Hill Country Foyer of the Hyatt. We will quickly split into groups and head off to different restaurants. Dinners will be concluded in time for us to be back for Scott McCloud’s plenary at 8 PM.

OPENING RECEPTION (THURSDAY)

Immediately following the first Plenary Session, a reception will be held in the Texas Ballroom. This reception is open to all conference participants and provides an informal opportunity to meet and reconnect with other members of the Narrative Society. The Conference Coordinators look forward to welcoming you to Austin. Dessert and a cash bar will be available; two drink tickets will be given to each participant.

BUSINESS LUNCH (SATURDAY)

All conference participants are welcome to join the Narrative Society Executive Committee for the Business Lunch on Saturday. The Executive Committee will give updates on the Society’s annual awards, the location of the 2009 Narrative Conference, and discuss other business items. A buffet lunch will be served.

NARRATIVE NIGHTCAPS AND JAZZ (SATURDAY)

Since our city is renowned for its nightlife – this is, after all, “The Live Music Capital of the World” – we are encouraging conference participants to explore Austin on Saturday night. In addition to the many Downtown bars, nightclubs, and live music venues, Saturday is the last night of the 30th Anniversary Old Pecan Street Festival, a family-friendly event featuring 200+ arts and crafts exhibitors, 40+ food vendors, and dozens of bands, dance lessons, theatre, comedy, and multicultural performers.

After exploring the city, please join us back at the Hyatt for a nightcap and live jazz on the 17th Floor. The Mike Fonseca Jazz Trio will play between 10 pm and 1 am in Foothills I; a cash bar will be available.

Scott McCloud
“Comics: A Medium in Transition”

American comics are changing fast. Bolstered by the literary ambitions, international influences and the growing importance of new technologies, the comics landscape shifts regularly in increasingly unpredictable directions. How does an art form communicate content effectively when all assumptions about its form are up for grabs? Author and comics artist Scott McCloud puts all these trends into perspective in a fast-moving visual presentation.

Scott McCloud has been writing and drawing comics since 1984. His book Understanding Comics was a New York Times Notable Book for 1994, and is available in 16 languages. McCloud has lectured on comics and digital media at Harvard University, MIT, Pixar, Microsoft and The Smithsonian Institution. His family recently completed a 50 state tour for his new book Making Comics. McCloud’s online comics can be found at scottmccloud.com.

“Narratives of Return”

What kind of quest is enacted by journeys and narratives of return? How do objects mediate these journeys? In this paper, I analyze the plot engendered by return journeys to lost homes, as well as the promises of revelation they hold out and ultimately disappoint. On the basis of two texts, the Palestinian writer Gassam Kanafani’s “Return to Haifa” (1969) and the Australian novelist Lily Brett’s Too Many Men (1999) I will trace the layers of search and revelation that characterize these plots and analyze intimate media of embodied memory that propel them: household objects, domestic interiors, items of clothing, photographs. In these narratives centering on the family and the home as the sites of dispossession, the figure of the lost child becomes the ultimate representation of the irreplaceable loss caused by the disruptions of war, dispossession, and Holocaust.

Kanafani’s novella about a Palestinian couple's return to Haifa and their encounter of a Holocaust survivor living in their former home and Brett’s novel about a daughter who travels with her father to Auschwitz and to his former home in Poland serve as rich texts for this inquiry into objects, the body memory they release, and the quest plots they engender. I read them in conversation with Paul Connerton’s and Aleida Assmann’s reflections on embodied memory and the role ordinary objects and places play in triggering it.

The paper ends with a third body of texts, the composite images, projections and collages of visual artist and psychoanalyst Bracha Lichtenberg-Ettinger who remaps the plot of return revolving around the lost child in an anti-nostalgic aesthetic. Overlaying images originating in several different times and spaces, she confronts the fantasy of return and recovery with a larger global awareness of contested spaces and competing geopolitical interests.

Marianne Hirsch is Professor of English and Comparative Literature at Columbia University and Director of the Institute for Research on Women and Gender. Her recent publications include Family Frames: Photography, Narrative, and Postmemory (1997), The Familial Gaze (1999), a special issue of Signs on “Gender and Cultural Memory” (2002), and Teaching the Representation of the Holocaust (2004). She has also published numerous articles on cultural memory, visuality and gender, particularly on the representation of World War Two and the Holocaust in literature, testimony and photography. Ghosts of Home: The Afterlife of Czernowitz in Jewish Memory, co-authored with Leo Spitzer, is forthcoming.
In this talk I explore a series of Latino-identified (north and south of the US/Mexico border) narrative fictions from a descriptive, not a prescriptive point of view. I consider a range of novels, short stories, comic books, and films that I judge as being interestingly generative and therefore metabolic in their relationship with the world out there and with the imagination of readers and viewers. An important component of this talk is to discuss what makes some Latino-identified narrative fiction good – and others bad. The axiological criteria I use are not based on “ethnic” identity. Rather, I explain why – judging by standards of execution – I consider certain narrative fictions as vital and generative and others as formulaic. This is seen in several Mexican and U.S. Latino films that depict an imaginary and sanitized middle class whose life unfolds outside of any significant time or space; that exalt and mythicize the (Mexican) peasant, conveniently transfigured into an imaginary Indian; or that aestheticize extreme poverty, filth, disease, oppression and exploitation in urban settings. Latino-identified narrative fiction is as rich and varied as its authors. My purpose in this talk is to show some exemplars of this abundance. As in all other “ethnic” artistic productions, variegated moral dilemmas and multiform emotions are poignantly present. Our task is to gauge them and understand them.
